COPYRIGHT COUNTS:
Know Your Rights and Responsibilities

The copyright law of Canada governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyright material. Certain copying may be an infringement of the copyright law. The library is not responsible for infringing copies made by the users of these machines.

Under the Canadian Copyright Act, you may copy parts of a published work for the purpose of research, private study, criticism, review, news reporting, education, parody or satire. This is an exception under the Act and is called Fair Dealing.

How do you know it’s Fair Dealing? The following 6 factors must be considered:

1. Purpose of the dealing – Why are you making the copy? It must be for research, private study, criticism, review, news reporting, education, parody or satire.
2. Character of the dealing – How many copies of the published work are you making?
3. Amount of the dealing – How much of the published work are you copying?
4. Alternatives to the dealing – Are there other options available to making the copies, e.g., providing links or using non-copyright-protected equivalents? Visit http://nclibraries.niagaracollege.ca/oer for information on open educational resources.
5. Nature of the work – Is the work being copied confidential? Is the work intended for a paying clientele?
6. Effect of the dealing – Will the copying of the work potentially compete with the market of the original?
